

Disablement conditions.

In addition to constructing a crude measure of disability we asked individuals about any conditions that they might suffer from which would prevent them from undertaking normal activities. We know who has problems with the following conditions.

chest or lungs

back or spine

joints

nerves

sight

hearing

speech

suffer from black out.

diabetes.

suffers from a mental handicap

other conditions.

We only know whether individuals suffer from these conditions. We do not know the degree or how much it prevents them from participating ^{fully} in normal life.
